

Recorder Ensemble

Course Description

One of the larger recorder groups in America, the Recorder Ensemble of the University of Delaware Academy of Lifelong Learning, utilizes soprano, alto, tenor and bass recorders. While the recorder is usually associated with Early Music, the ensemble will play a broader range of music. We will play music from the Renaissance period through America's Colonial period to the Broadway show tunes of today. The entire class periods are devoted to playing music with one of the instructors serving as a conductor.

Weekly Layout:

Explore new music

Explore new music

Explore new music

Select music for end of semester concert

Sight read new music and then practice music for concert

Sight read new music and then practice music for concert

Sight read new music and then practice music for concert

Sight read new music and then practice music for concert

Sight read new music and then practice music for concert

Practice music for concert

Practice music for concert

Give concert

Explore new music