

This course will provide the language skills needed to carry out basic communicative functions while traveling.

Participants will learn pronunciation, vocabulary and grammar to be able to ask directions, to order food, to use public transportation, as well as solve some simple communicative problems.

They will be encouraged to develop learning strategies by comparing and contrasting French to English. This approach will assist them to become independent learners. They will be encouraged to figure things out instead of attempting to memorize them.

They will have opportunities to test out their learning through interactive practices.

This course is designed for those who have taken the first semester of French for Travelers, or the equivalent.